

TIME
30 - 90
mins

AGE
17+

PLAYERS
4 - 20+

Before playing, make sure to divide the Mod cards and Death cards into separate, shuffled piles.

Instead of drawing a Death or Mod card, try drawing a Blank card for some DIY fun!

the Kill

The eldest player is the starting Monarch. The first opponent will be the player to the left of the Monarch. All players draw two (2) Mod cards.

The two current opponents draw two (2) Death cards. They both play one card and discard the other.

Both players argue, trying to convince all other players that their death is the worse way to die of the two. Any player that isn't arguing can play a Mod card on one of the arguing players. That player must use that Mod in their argument for the round. Only up to one (1) Mod can be played on each Player's argument. Whenever you play a Mod on another player, draw back up to two (2) Mod cards.

After they are done, all players vote for the worst death. If there is a tie, both players flip over a random new Death card and argue again. The winner of the argument keeps their original Death card from the round, which counts as one point.

The winning player is declared the new Monarch, and play continues with the next player to the left challenging the Monarch. When all players decide to move on with their lives, everyone counts up their points. Whoever has the most points is declared the Master Monarch of the game, and the final winner.

To set up Deathmatch, every player draws seven (7) Death cards. The most youthful player is the starting Executioner. The Executioner starts by flipping over one (1) Mod card for all to see.

Each player except for the Executioner plays a Death card face down and draws a new Death card afterwards. Once everyone has played a Death card, the Executioner will randomize the cards and then reveal them.

Taking into account the Mod card, which will modify every Death card, the Executioner will pick one Death card as being the true worst way to die. The winner of the round will keep the Mod card of the round so as to keep score.

Play continues with the title of Executioner being passed to the left after every round. When all players decide to move on with their lives, everyone counts up their points. Whoever has the most points is declared the Master Executioner of the game, and the final winner.

The tallest player is the starting Mime. The Mime starts by drawing three (3) Death cards and choosing one (1). The other 2 cards are then put in a discard pile.

The Mime acts out the death described by the card, and all other players try to guess what the death is. The Mime may not talk, but can answer yes / no questions from the audience by nodding their head.

If nobody can guess the death correctly, and the Mime gives up, the Mime draws three (3) new Death cards and acts out the new Death card. When another player correctly guesses the death, that player wins the round. The winner gets the Death card of the round so as to keep score. Play continues with the title of Mime being passed to the previous round's winner.

When all players decide to move on with their lives, everyone counts up their points. Whoever has the most points is declared the Master Mime of the game, and the final winner.
